

PIEMONTE

The home of Barolo and Barbaresco (made using the Nebbiolo grape), Barbera and Dolcetto. The region also offers lighter and sparkling wines like Moscato D'Asti, Brachetto and a beautiful white wine called Gavi made from Cortese grape. Most of the wines of Piedmont come from the Langhe sub-region and its misty hills. The land is overlooked by the Alps, in fact in Italian the name Piedmont means "at the foot of the mountain". The largely red wines are powerful and muscular, but like the Rhone valley there is also enormous elegance and finesse in the good producers. The whites are elegant with considerable backbone.

PODERI E CANTINE ODDERO

Poderi e Cantine Oddero is one of the top producers of Barolo, Barbaresco and Barbera. The winery dates back to the 18th century. Just over half of the 35-hectare Oddero vineyards produce Nebbiolo for Barolos and Barbarescos. These award-winning wines consistently perform well in tastings and with good reason. There is real finesse and depth and a beguiling sense of terroir. These are serious Italian wines that make any list stand out as being prestigious and well-sourced.

LA MESMA

The La Mesma vineyards are located in Monterotondo, at the very heart of the Gavi DOCG region in Italy. The region benefits considerably from coastal influences. Production is on twenty-six hectares of Cortese vines. The Gavi area is rich in biodiversity, with woods surrounding the vineyards and wild animals free to roam. La Mesma, owned and run by three sisters, believes great wine is based on the fruit, obtained with gentle, hands-on farming practices.
